

Carter supports Iran commission

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said Wednesday he will support establishment of an "appropriate commission with a carefully defined purpose" as a way to end the stalemate over American hostages in Iran.

Carter did not define the commission's purpose, nor did he suggest that the release of the hostages, held 102 days, was imminent.

Carter said in a televised news conference there were now "positive signs" in the Iranian crisis, but he also said it would be wise to "guard against excessive optimism."

Under a proposal for establishment of a U.N.-authorized commission, a panel of neutral observers would assess the crimes charged by Iran's revolutionary regime to the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and any U.S. role in his alleged crimes against the Iranian people.

The idea of a commission, the president said, originated with Kurt Waldheim, the U.N. secretary general. This touched on a running controversy between the administration and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who claims credit for the proposal.

Carter specifically refused to acknowledge any U.S. guilt for restoring the shah to the throne in Iran in 1983. "That's ancient history, and I don't think it's appropriate for me to go into the propriety of something that happened many years ago," he said.

Iranian officials have said the United States must accept blame for past support of the shah before the hostage crisis can be resolved.

Challenging his rival for the Democratic presidential nomination, Carter said Kennedy's statements on Iran and also the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan "have not been true, they have not been accurate and they have not helped our country."

Kennedy has attacked Carter's strategy in trying to gain release of the hostages in Tehran and contended that a weak foreign policy encouraged the Soviets to move troops into Afghanistan.

Kennedy has tried to draw Carter into debate over foreign policy as well as domestic issues.

Carter said he would not resume "normal camaigning" until the hostages are released, but he did it specifically rule out a debate with his rival before Jan. 1.

Meanwhile, Carter reaffirmed that if the Soviet troops are not withdrawn from Afghanistan by next Thursday, he will call on American athletes to boycott the Olympic Games in Moscow this July.

He said there is no possibility he will change his mind if the Soviets carry out a withdrawal between that deadline and May 24, when national Olympic committees must decide whether to send teams.

"We must convince the Soviet Union through peaceful means," the president stressed, "that they cannot invade a neighboring country with impunity."

"What we would like to have, first of all, is a Soviet withdrawal and a commitment . . . that the Soviet Union would not invade another country," Carter said.

"We would like to have a neutral government," Carter said. "If there had to be a transitional phase . . . then perhaps some peacekeeping" force could be set up through the United Nations.

Soviets remain until border stable

By The Associated Press

The Soviet Union has advised key Asian, European and African countries in recent days that it will begin withdrawing troops from Afghanistan when that country's border with Pakistan is stabilized, diplomats in London reported Wednesday.

But Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, in New Delhi for talks on the Afghan situation, gave Indian leaders little or no hope for an early pullout, Indian officials indicated.

An Indian emissary sent this week by Prime Minister Indira Gandhi to Kabul, Babrak Karmal's government it would "invite" the Soviets to withdraw as soon as it has assurances there will be no "outside aggression," according to Indian officials in London.

This appeared to be a reference to claims by Moscow and Kabul that Moslem insurgents were receiving aid from American, Chinese, British and Egyptian military experts.

The governments of those countries have denied the charges.

The Soviets began pouring troops into Afghanistan in December to crush a 21-month-old Moslem insurrection against the communist regime and ensure the success of the Dec. 27 coup in which President Hafizullah Amin was executed and replaced by Karmal, regarded as a more pro-Soviet leader. The Soviet Union now has an estimated 90,000 troops in the central Asian nation.

Word of the Soviet and Afghan diplomatic moves has been passed to Western capitals by Indian and other Asian governments, said the diplomats in London, who asked not to be identified. They said they believed the moves were related to President Carter's Feb. 20 deadline for the Soviets to remove their troops from Afghanistan or risk a boycott of the summer Olympics in Moscow.

Soviet officials said Wednesday, "the language of ultimatums cannot be used in talking with the Soviet Union."

Church cites ERA position

By WENDY OGATA & LARRY WERNER
Universe News Editors

The LDS Church will issue the "most comprehensive and definitive" statement to date concerning its position on the Equal Rights Amendment in the March issue of its Ensign magazine, a church spokesman said Wednesday.

The 23-page pamphlet entitled "The Church and The Proposed Equal Rights Amendment: A Moral Issue," will be an insert in the monthly magazine, said Don LeFevre of the church's public communications department.

The official statement details the church's opposition to the amendment based on "both political and moral aspects."

LeFevre admitted that recent national publicity surrounding the church and the ERA issue prompted the compilation of the insert. The national news media recently focused on the church and the ERA as a result of the excommunication of feminist Sonia Johnson last December.

"Events of the past couple of months have kept it along," LeFevre said of the statement.

The church spokesman also reaffirmed the church's position that members "are not excommunicated for their support of the ERA."

"Any member of the church can support the ERA," he said. "It's the method of support that can be grounds for excommunication."

The Ensign insert says that "members who choose not to follow the counsel of the First Presidency are completely free to do so."

However, the statement quotes George Q. Cannon, a former member of the church's First Presidency, as saying that members "publishing those differences of opinion, and seeking by arguments and sophistry and special pleading to enforce upon the people to produce division and strife, and to place the acts and counsels of the authorities of the church, if possible, in a wrong light" are guilty of apostasy.

The First Presidency of the church has expressed full approval of the pamphlet insert which was compiled by personnel of the Ensign magazine, he added.

The statement begins with a brief question-and-answer section followed by 18 pages of quotes and passages from prominent LDS and non-LDS lawyers, the Congressional Record and leaders of other religious groups opposed to the amendment.

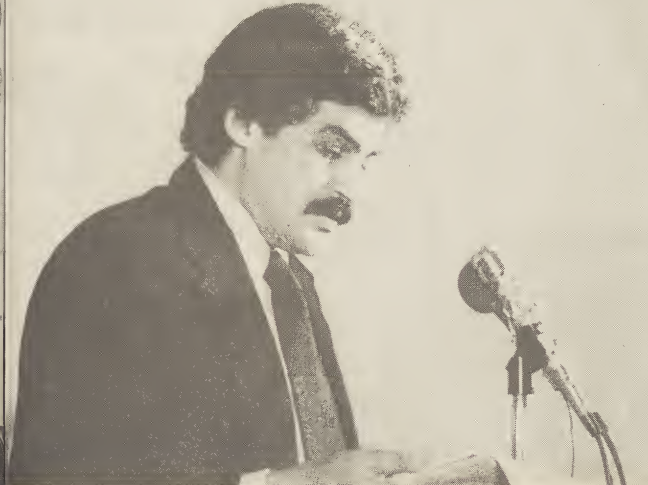

The statement says the church "favors equal rights for women," and quotes a 1942 statement by Elder John A. Widtsoe, former member of the church's Quorum of the Twelve Apostles, who said, "In the church there is full equality between man and woman. There can be no question in the church of man's rights versus woman's rights."

The insert says the church "recognizes that there have been injustices to women before the law and in society. Where specific laws or practices discriminate against women, members are counseled to work energetically for appropriate change."

The insert contains the church's first official statement concerning its position on the possible draft of women into military service saying, "... to require women to serve, especially on the same basis as men, would remove a traditional freedom."

The statement says that many ERA proponents believe that if men are drafted, women should be also. The document further asserts that Congress already has the power to draft women under existing laws but has never chosen to do so.

Omar Kader, BYU professor of social science, speaks to a crowd of 75 Wednesday night at the first of four public hearings on the proposed MX missile project.

The missile project has been called the most profound public issue in Utah history.

Utah Valley opposes MX missile

By MICHAEL MANGUM
Universe Staff Writer

The proposed MX missile is the most profound public issue in the state's history, said Gov. Scott Matheson at a public meeting Wednesday night in the Provo High school auditorium.

Approximately 75 local residents attended the meeting. Many of them voiced negative opinions on the $33 billion project.

When asked if Utah and Nevada would have any power to stop the federal government from developing the missile system in Utah, the governor indicated that he had asked the same question at a press conference in Salt Lake City.

When I first asked this question of the Undersecretary of the Air Force, he told me that we (the citizens of Utah) did have a veto. After the conference, however, a clarification was offered saying we would have a "political veto."

Matheson added: "To me this means that if the federal government decided to build the MX, it would then insist that national defense has priority over states' rights."

Omar Kader, BYU professor of social sciences, expressed an opinion held by many other Utah Valley residents that "there are other more intelligent solutions to MX."

He said the proposed racetrack system has "some real tragic flaws."

He cited some of these flaws as being the missile's excessive costs, its vulnerability to a Russian attack and the danger which the system poses to Western states.

"A program of national defense must not be riddled by uncertainties and confusion," he said.

Dress code reviewed to remove ambiguity

By KAREN M. HANSEN
Universe Staff Writer

Some clarifications of BYU's dress and grooming code may be forthcoming, according to Gail S. Halvorsen, assistant dean of student life.

Halvorsen said the code is currently being reviewed by the Board of Trustees in an effort to consolidate all guidance which has been given on dress code and to eliminate ambiguity.

The review is expected to be completed sometime in March, and if changes are made, the rewritten code will be distributed soon thereafter.

The revision was drafted last fall by a committee consisting of student, faculty and administrative representatives. Elwin G. Pulsipher, of University Standards, said if the code is changed, it would be the first revision since 1972.

Pulsipher said the review began in an effort to have one uniform policy for all departments on campus. Several organizations had different statements on the dress code, some of which were not explicit in others.

The recommendation would combine all dress statements into one document. Elwin G. Pulsipher, of University Standards, said if the code is changed, it would be the first revision since 1972.

Halvorsen said the review project is part of a continuing process to identify areas where students and faculty can work together in upholding the standards of the Board of Trustees has set as appropriate. It is a "package approach," which is equally as pertinent to faculty as students," he added.

The proposed revision redefines several areas. The tentative redefinition of unacceptable jeans and grubby attire includes blue denim pants, overalls, tank tops and sweatshirts. Suitable hair length for men is defined as "cut and styled so in normal wear it does not cover any part of the ear."

Other areas treated include swim suit styles (not including before), wearing of shoes on campus and athletic attire.

However, Halvorsen emphasized that changes in wording may be made before final approval by the Board of Trustees is given. "There are no dramatic changes," he said.

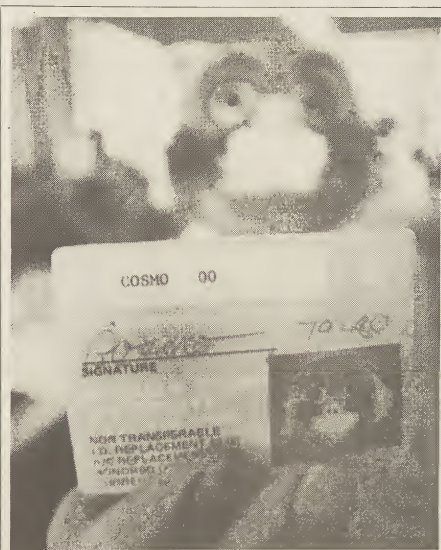

Halvorsen explained that the intention of the revision is not to police or coerce people, but to make sure the standards are understood, and then let everyone govern themselves.

"We wanted to do all we could to present the guidelines in as direct and clear a way as possible," he said. "When people really understand them, I think there will be better compliance."

Halvorsen said Dean Sorenson is still accepting input from students and faculty on how they can work together to reach the standards the Board of Trustees outlines.

"We feel the frustration of students who are marginal, and who can point to examples of others who are worse," Halvorsen said.

"However, the university has not changed. We all have to be involved individually as students, faculty and administrators to help each other fulfill the responsibility of this code."

'Minister of religion' only draft exemption

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's young men and women looking for a sure way out of being drafted will have to turn to religion, under President Carter's registration proposal.

Brayton Harris, spokesman for the Selective Service System, said that unlike previous drafts when there were many exemptions and deferments, the only automatic exemption if a draft occurs under Carter's proposal would be "minister of religion."

That doesn't mean, however, that there won't be some exemptions.

"The theory is that any deferments and exemptions should be granted on the merits of the individual case, such as hardship or conscientious objection," Harris said. "There will be no student deferments, no occupational deferments and no automatic deferments for family status, such as having children. The only automatic exemption will be for minister of religion."

Local draft boards will make the decisions about exemptions and deferments, Harris said.

President Carter sent Congress a report this week outlining his decision to call for the resumption of draft registration.

The report, in which Carter asks for authority to register women, also says that, should a military draft become necessary, it would be based on a random lottery system that would take 20 years olds into account.

The lottery system would be based on dates of birth chosen at random, the report says.

The plan rules out automatic student, occupational and family status deferments in an effort to correct the draft inequities of the Vietnam period which tended to protect the more affluent at the expense of the poor, the report says.

However, the report notes that the Justice Department has said Congress could alter Carter's proposal to allow some exemptions and deferments.

Carter has stressed that he "has no intention under present circumstances" of calling for a draft. And he would need congressional approval to do so.

But at the same time, Carter has asked Congress for $45 million to register the nation's approximately 8 million 19 and 20 year olds born in 1960 and 1961.

Beginning Jan. 1, 1981 the Selective Service will ask those born in 1962 to register, and it will continue to ask 18 year olds to register on their birthday.

Garn predicts Soviet peace move

SALT LAKE CITY — Utah Sen. Jake Garn predicts the Soviet Union will launch a new "peace offensive" soon, but he warns that it won't last unless the United States stands firm now.

The Republican senator said the United States and its allies should initiate an expansion of the trade embargo on trade with the Russians. He spoke to University of Utah students Wednesday morning at a Hinckley Institute session.

The Republican senator said Russia will begin making friendly overtures soon, but they'll "hit somewhere else" in two or three years if the U.S. government doesn't make it clear the Soviet aggression won't be tolerated.

Garn said the MX missile system won't be enough to deter the Soviets — it will take economic sanctions as well.

Actor Janssen dies of heart attack

HOLLYWOOD — Actor David Janssen, who led detectives on a tense chase for years as the falsely accused murderer in television's "The Fugitive," died of a heart attack Wednesday at age 48.

Janssen suffered the attack at his Malibu home, said actor Stuart Whitman, a longtime friend who happened to be driving by about 4:30 a.m. on his way to his ranch in Santa Barbara.

Whitman stopped when he saw an ambulance and a fire truck outside the Janssen home, and found paramedics trying to revive the actor.

"They had taken him out of bed and they were working on him, and working on him," Whitman said. "It must have been half an hour altogether. One of them then said, 'I think I've got a heartbeats,' and they took him to the hospital."

Janssen was pronounced dead at Santa Monica Hospital.

Utah burns more but uses less gas

SALT LAKE CITY — Utah drivers used 73.4 million gallons more gasoline in 1979 than the year before, but that's because of increased population — not consumption, state tax officials say.

State tax figures show that Utah drivers burned 715.5 million gallons of fuel in 1979, up from 642.1 million gallons in 1978.

"On face value, it looks like we're using more gas," said Alene Bentley, spokesman for the Utah Energy Office. "But you figure that on a per capita or per registered vehicle basis, then consumption is down."

She said Utah's population is growing about 4 percent a year, but between 1973 and 1978, per capita gas consumption was down 5.7 percent.

Early 1979 figures indicate it might be down as much as 11 percent last year, Bentley said.

In 1974, Utah had 1.2 million residents and 749,000 registered vehicles that consumed 656 million gallons of gasoline.

By 1978, the state population was 1.3 million with 996,000 registered vehicles consuming 823 million gallons.

Bentley said that means Utah drivers used 52 gallons of gas less per vehicle in 1978 than in 1974.

Hostage release plan accepted

The United States has agreed in principle to a plan for release of American hostages in Tehran, it was reported Wednesday, but the White House declined comment. Iran's president, said Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini accepted a three-point "action plan" for the release.

It was not known if the reported U.S. acceptance was of a plan disclosed earlier this week by President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr of Iran, or whether Bani-Sadr's initial plan had been changed.

The report on the U.S. acceptance, carried by ABC News, said the hostages would not be held by the Red Cross or any other third party.

Instead, ABC said, they would be released to United Nations officials in Tehran after the members of a commission were named. Under the agreement, the hostages, held at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran for 102 days, would be free to testify before the commission if they wish, it said.

ABC did not say what the commission's purpose would be. It said it would be made up of representatives from Third World countries.

Bani-Sadr said Monday he had proposed to Khomeini the group investigate "crimes" committed in Iran by both deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and the Islamic Revolution.

The State Department reacted by saying it would not "profess guilt" to any U.S. actions in Iran and appeared to view the plan with caution. Since then U.S. officials have said they will not answer questions on the hostage crisis.

Full compensation denied to Attorney General at Y

By ANDY HOPSON
Universe Staff Writer

The decision of the ASBYU Executive Council to give the attorney general full compensation (tuition and books) was vetoed Wednesday by ASBYU President Dave Lister.

"I'm vetoing the proposal because the traffic sub-committee is presently looking closely at the judicial system and is considering giving compensation to all specialists who spend time in the judiciary," said Lister who said the timing of the proposal could disrupt the efforts of the committee.

Lister said he isn't against the idea of compensating the attorney general. "I'm not against the proposal," he said. "I just want to include with it an overall re-evaluation of the entire judicial system."

Kelvin Cullimore, ASBYU vice president of organizations, presented the proposal to the Executive Council in a meeting last week.

"The Attorney General is the grease that makes the wheels turn smoothly both in the judiciary and in the Executive Council," he said. "I understand Dave's hesitancy, but I think that compensation would help the courts to be more consistent by giving the attorney general some incentive to complete his full term in office."

Cullimore pointed out that in the past five years only one attorney general has remained in office for his entire term.

The traffic sub-committee has been meeting to discuss possible changes in the judicial system. One idea under consideration is to replace the present system with a full-time appeals officer.

"We're considering several different modifications," said David M. Sorenson, dean of Student Life, but we have not yet made any decisions.

Lister said, "Based on Sorenson's track record of continued support of the students, I think they are being fairly represented in the committee meetings."

Chris Burdick, a past attorney general and chief justice of the supreme court, doesn't think the system needs to be changed. "Only five percent of all tickets issued are appealed," she said. "Of those, a little over half are suspended or reduced. I don't see any inconsistencies there."

She added that she doesn't think it is inconceivable that the student security police officers could be making an occasional error in the tickets they issue.

"We're setting a deadline for ourselves to present an alternate proposal to the Executive Council by Feb. 21," said Lister. "This proposal will be designed to benefit the entire judiciary."

Lister's veto can be overridden by a two-thirds majority vote of the Executive Council. "Right now an override doesn't look too hopeful," said Cullimore.

GEOFFREY CHAUCER: A VALENTINE'S DAY SALUTE TO THE MAN WHO KNEW ABOUT LOVE

Karen Lynn, English

Chaucer's reputation for ribaldry may sometimes cause us to ignore the many messages he has to give us concerning human love. Chaucer knows it all.

OUR BASIC PREMISES — THE TRUE FUNDAMENTALS OF GOOD WRITING

Marshall R. Craig, English

The rules of good writing are often viewed merely as numerous arbitrary regulations which prohibit a writer from doing his "thing" in his own way. THE UNIVERSE AND A SENSE OF PERSPECTIVE

Duane Dudley, Physics and Astronomy

In his confrontation with Korhbor, Alma cited order in the universe as an evidence for the existence of God. Does modern astronomy increase our understanding and appreciation of God's creations? Do the scriptures, in turn, give us a perspective on science? How can both of these great sources of truth help us to view our own lives in a more meaningful way?

Ensign

"Should it at some time exercise that power, Congress could give women the option of not going into combat and could preserve their privacy rights. Congress could even recede the drafting of women. Passage of the ERA would not allow Congress any of these options," the statement says.

In reference to the roles of men and women, the statement affirms that the "responsibility of bearing and nurturing children" was assigned the mother "at the time of the Creation." It says "the primary role of providing was assigned the father."

But it adds that "the opportunity to 'subdue' the earth and to 'have dominion' over it applies equally to the full creative abilities and energies of all God's children, male and female, married or single. But within the stewardship of parenthood, God took care to describe the primary responsibilities of mothers and of fathers."

The document asserts that the ERA "would represent a serious eroding of the powers of states and . . . a massive transfer of legislative power dealing with domestic relations from the states to the federal level."

The statement cites the federal government's attempt to force BYU to comply with a provision of the Fair Housing Act as an overextension of federal power. The government had asked the university to abandon its requirements of separate housing units for men and women.

In like manner, the ERA would shift law-making power from elected legislators to non-elected judges, thus eroding the separation of powers protecting basic freedoms, according to the statement.

"Therefore, maintaining the essential separation and division of powers provided for by the divinely inspired Constitution is a moral issue for Latter-day Saints," the document says.

The statement reaffirms the church's claim that the ERA is primarily a "moral issue." It says previous statements of the First Presidency have identified moral issues concerning the ERA such as failure of fathers to care for their families, elimination of statutory protection for women and children, problems resulting from women in the military, homosexual and lesbian activities, abortion and other similar concerns.

"Passage of the ERA would carry with it the risk of extending constitutional protection to immoral same-sex — lesbian and homosexual — marriages," the statement says.

The Ensign insert concludes with a section devoted to statements from the First Presidency concerning the ERA and a brief summary of the amendment's current ratification status.

Though he is in the spotlight at many campus activities, not many people know who is really "inside" Cosmo, the irrepressible BYU mascot.

In an attempt to unveil this mystery, a rare, exclusive interview was obtained with him at a secret location.

Cosmo sat forward on his chair and began. "I'm just a card-carrying student like everyone else," he said. "People look at me funny when I study in the library, but where else can a cougar study?"

Cosmo said he once had trouble getting his activity card renewed.

"I was referred to standards because my whiskers were too long," he said. "They finally exempted me, though, because I get a rash when I shave."

The mascot has had some health problems this year but is now in excellent physical condition.

"My head was run over by a car during football season," he said. "It was kind of a pain at first, but I got a new head that works just fine."

But Cosmo admits he has some trouble with his eyesight.

"My peripheral vision's not the best," he said. "I once ran into a floor sweeper during the halftime of a basketball game and sent him flying. Another time, I almost ran over a cheerleader while I was riding my unicycle."

Despite this minor infirmity, Cosmo loves sports and excels in all of them.

"I'd be out there playing except it wouldn't be fair for me to take away the glory from the rest of the team," he said.

However, it isn't always easy being the mascot for the winning teams of BYU.

"There's a lot of anti-cougar sentiment out there," said Cosmo.

Once San Diego's mascot, the chicken, got upset because Cosmo gave him a bag of bird feed.

"He attacked me so I had to pin him," said Cosmo.

"I just can't understand how anyone could hate a cougar."

Cosmo gets upset when anyone suggests getting a live mascot for BYU.

"A live mascot? What do you think I am?" he said.

The BYU cougar is confident he is the best mascot at any school.

"There's no question that I'm superior," he said.

"That Colorado ram just stands there chewing his cud. I can't even do any cheers or flips."

He added that Louie the Lobo is just there to watch the game and the San Diego chicken has "feathers in its head."

"People sometimes try to outsmart me," said Cosmo. "They wait outside the locker room after the games. It's almost as if they expected me to be someone else. But aren't they surprised when they see a cougar come out in his street clothes and drive away?"

When asked about his love life, Cosmo said, "I learned how to do somersaults when I first met the cheerleaders. They were so cute, I literally flipped for them."

He said the highlight of his career was working with the Osmonds during their BYU concerts.

"I used to keep my eye on the Cougarettes until I met Marie," he said. "I posed for a picture with her on my comp, and she's had my heart ever since."

When the pressure of being a celebrity on campus got to be too much for him, Cosmo's favorite retreat is his family's residence on Y Mountain.

"Nothing can beat a vacation in the old home den," he said.

For entertainment, Cosmo said he likes to watch The Muppet Show.

"I can really relate to Kermit the Frog and Fozzie Bear," he said.

As for heroes, Cosmo has only one — Snoopy.

"Snoopy is my hero because he's great at everything, and he's cool," said the cougar. "And everyone knows that Cosmo is the coolest cat on campus."

Value of penny rising

WASHINGTON (AP) — It could happen any day now — the value of a penny may exceed one cent.

Government officials said Tuesday that if the market price of copper continues to rise and exceeds $1.50 a pound, the value of a penny will top one cent.

The penny is 95 percent copper and copper prices have been rising since last fall.

It was worth $1.41-a-pound Tuesday and experts say it could hit the Deena Robbins sails high during a practice session on the balance beam. She is one of the reasons the women's gymnastics team is a national contender this year.

Gymnastics is her job

By LESLIE LEWIS
Universe Sports Writer

To bend meticulously and make the body perform flips, twists, and show grandeur, strength and balance on a nine inch wide beam; to confront the bars with eagerness and anticipation yet contemplate its hazardless and the extreme attention that it demands — this is what freshman gymnast Deena Robbins embodies in her performance as a member of BYU's gymnastics team.

"When competing it's fun, but it's also a job," says the gymnast, who has been ranked as high as third in the nation this year. "I'm very serious when I compete. I have to concentrate on what I'm doing, since I'm on scholarship because it's more like a job for me now and I want to do my best."

The Salt Lake City native attended Cottonwood High School and is now on a full athletic scholarship at BYU.

Being one of the nation's top gymnasts has helped Robbins to be more conscientious of her work and performance.

"I never thought being ranked nationally would ever materialize. There are a lot of good gymnasts in the college program. I never expected it." She said that now she is considered a top gymnast "the only pressure added on me now is to defend what I have."

When the announcer introduces her as a ranked gymnast, she says, "I want to go out and show them that that's where I should be."

Living on eggs and grapefruit for breakfast and salad for dinner, the 102-pound, 5-5 athlete works three to four hours a day in practice.

"Three days a week we are required to lift weights in order to keep our strength up," explains Robbins. "After practice the team runs two miles every day which is good because it keeps the weight down."

In the summer, the dedicated freshman keeps in shape for off-season by working out three hours a day on technique and fine points of her routines.

Ruggers face Arizonians; Icccats visiting Canada

While the BYU rugby squad is preparing to open the season, the hockey team is scheduled to play in their first international competition.

The BYU rugby team is putting the finishing touches to pre-season drills. Traveling to Arizona, the ruggers will open their 1980 competition against University of Arizona and Arizona State University on Thursday and Saturday.

This season, which will include 18 games, will take the ruggers to Victoria, Canada, and to Southern California later in the spring. Another highlight will be an exhibition match against an all-star selection March 8 in Provo.

Coch John Seggar says he is very encouraged and optimistic about this year's team. The Cougar ruggers are led by player-assistant Matt Brown from New Zealand. Three other key players are Paul Meyer from South Africa, and Saia Paongo and Fisi Moloni, both from Tonga. The standout jumper in the Cougar lineup promises to be Alan Bagley of Tucson, Ariz.

The fall season turned up some outstanding young newcomers in Eric Jorgensen, Rod Nielson, and Thorpe Facer in forward positions. Ken Soelberg, Danny Moore, and Pamela Fiebia will round out the lineup in back positions.

Looking to this year's schedule, Seggar said, "We may not have the best win-loss record this year. However, it's the toughest schedule we've ever had."

"I hope the team will mature playing at such a high level of competition."

Icccats in Canada

For the first time in history the BYU hockey team will engage in international competition.

The team will play Friday and Saturday against the Tabor Palace Pats in Tabor, Alberta, Canada.

"Playing hockey in Canada is like playing soccer in Argentina," said Scott Kearin, the team goalie. "The sport was born there and the level of competition is high."

Kearin typified his teammates as being "nervous but confident" of the experience and said many of the players are from Canada.

The Canadian visit will come on the heels of two ties in games with the University of Wyoming. The Icccats skated to 7-7 and 3-3 standoffs with the Cowboys in Laramie last weekend. Randy Grininger tallied four goals and two assists in the Friday night contest.

"We'll have to play much better in Canada than we did in Wyoming if we're even going to be competitive," Kearin said.

Coch Joe Bernardy is hopeful that a good showing in Canada will serve as a recruiting tool for the Cougars.

The Cougars' league record is now 2-3-2. The next home games are Feb. 22 and 23 against New Mexico at the Bountiful Ice Arena.

students place in theater competition

Two BYU theater students recently took top honors in the 1980 Rocky Mountain Theater Festival at the University of Montana, Missoula, Jan. 23-26. Stuart Wakefield, a 1979 theater design graduate, took first place in the Design Competition, and Maria Elena Guereca, a BYU theater student, took second place in the Irene Ryan Acting Scholarship Competition.

Both were contesting with several students from universities and colleges of the Rocky Mountain Region of the American Theater Association. The Rocky Mountain Region includes schools from Utah, Idaho, Montana, Colorado and Wyoming.

Wakefield received $150 for his first place finish. In competition with eight other students, he won the contest with his set design for the BYU production of Arthur Miller's "The Crucible." Directed by Charles Whitman, the play was presented at BYU last October.

Ming Cho Lee, professor of scene design at Yale Drama School and designer of many shows on and off Broadway, said Wakefield's design was well defined and well executed in creating the "proper perspective." Wakefield said being judged by Lee was an encouraging learning experience.

"The one thing I learned," he commented, "was that I need to become freer with my designs. Mr. Lee told me it looked like I had spent hours on my renderings, which I had, but if I had been freer my work wouldn't have looked so precise."

In comparison, Wakefield said, when Lee showed slides of his work it became apparent what he meant by "freer."

"They (Lee's designs) looked like no effort had gone into them at all," Wakefield explained. "But, knowing Ming Cho Lee's reputation as a craftsman, I knew that wasn't true."

Miss Guereca, who won in her competition by performing a scene from "The Crucible," earned a spot as an alternate in the national Irene Ryan Acting Scholarship Competition to be presented at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C., in April. Twelve regional first place winners will compete at that time for several thousand dollars in scholarships.

Also in competition at the festival was BYU's production of "The Crucible." The production was one of the four selected for presentation at the festival. Of the 18 productions competing for the four finalist spots, "The Crucible" was chosen along with "Nevada," an original play from the University of Utah; "The Corn is Green," presented by Mesa College in Grand Junction, Colorado; and three one-act plays by George Bernard Shaw, presented by Colorado State University. The winner of the competition will be announced sometime in the next few weeks.

The Academy knows best...?

By BLAIR HOWELL
Universe Guest Writer

There's only one clear-cut, now or never, definite, without a doubt shoe-in to be given a nomination in this year's Academy Award voting once they're announced Feb. 28, and it appears to be an across-the-board nomination sweep.

"Kramer vs. Kramer," the tender film of a father fighting for his son's custody rights, has already won Best Picture honors from the New York City and Los Angeles film critics' associations, two groups who agree as often as Carter and Brezhnev. The film also won Best Actor for Dustin Hoffman, Best Supporting Actress for Meryl Streep, as well as Best Director for Robert Benton, not to mention eight Golden Globe awards. Besides, it's also a good film.

But then who knows? The voters' only consistency is their inconsistency; predicting voter trends is as difficult as writing serious columns on the same topic. It can't be done.

Last year, the pro-war eagle, John Wayne, presented the anti-war "The Deer Hunter" his Best Picture award, irony of ironies. Two years ago, it was between Jane Fonda's touching portrait of German fascism in "Julia" and a powerful struggle in the ballet film "The Turning Point." But the two strong films split the vote and Woody Allen's comic "Annie Hall" took the votes, wonder of wonders.

"After 'Kramer,' nothing is sure (sure) Remember, this is Hollywood. Two films that people either hate or people love are 'Apocalypse Now,' from Francis Coppola of 'The Godfather' fame, and Bob Fosse's nakedly autobiographical 'All That Jazz.'"

"Apocalypse" is big and splashy, and there are enough stories about its production to make it the most talked-about film of the year. However, many critics are quick to explain how the film fell apart — Martin Sheen finished his journey up the river. It did.

In "All That Jazz," dancer-choreographer Fosse, who also did "Cabaret," "Pippin" and "Lenny," bases his film on his scrape with death and the thoughts he had during open-heart surgery, expressed through elaborate fantasy musical production numbers. The film is confusing, but that's how Fosse views his life, with a deep ambivalence. "Jazz" hasn't made it to Utah yet, but Motion Picture Association rules stipulate only that a film be released in either Los Angeles or New York City; no mention is made of Utah.

"Apocalypse" demonstrates extreme pretentiousness. "Jazz" exhibits a bright sparkle of genius. But both films deserve to be cited with a nomination for the risks they take.

There's also the oft-mentioned "Breaking Away," the film of mid-American frustrations of growing up in a college town. It's a "sleeper," what made "Rocky" a favorite (but, thankfully, "Breaking Away" is without the trite, cliché-ridden dialogue). "The Electric Horseman" appears on some lists because of the return of the romantic pairing of Jane Fonda and Robert Redford. It is a fun movie, but sadly short on romance and substance of any degree.

Then there's "Manhattan." The reader will recall that Woody Allen, its writer-director-star, is now being called a comic genius (his "Annie Hall" walked away with top honors). "Manhattan" is pure poetry set in what can be an ugly, grim New York, with its plot centering on romantic attachments in New York City. When considering that this is a Hollywood industry and Allen has been unyielding in his hate-Hollywood sentiments, it may hurt him. It hasn't hurt him much in years past however, if he is nominated for Best Director, it will be his third nomination in a row.

Awards for Best Actor and Actress also mean big bucks at the box office, but are even harder to predict. Some charge that the Academy only picks sentimental favorites, but that doesn't explain how Richard Burton has been given some eight or nine nominations and not a single 13-inch gold statue. Others insist the awards are given according to the merits of an individual performance, but there is a long list of very talented performers who have never been so cited that disproves this one too.

Actually, the only difference between the general public — you and me, and the members of the Academy — the voters, is one of luck. The voters have the opportune position to have a winner in who does and who does not wind up with a nomination, and then an award. They vote. We just watch it on TV.

Will the voter ever be happy?

Four years ago it was Jimmy Carter who was the fresh, new face of national politics. After campaigning for two years, Carter had smiled his way into what political analysts had once predicted as the impossible — the presidency of the United States. And now, 1980 has presented us with another political upstart — George Bush. Three months ago, a majority of the nation's voters had never heard of him, and now there is a chance he could be our next president.

Why this political phenomenon of supporting the new faces, the underdogs? The answer could be that Americans are never satisfied. Americans are looking for a fault-free, god-like leader who will provide instantaneous solutions to all our problems.

The Republican field of candidates is an impressive list of seasoned politicians. Ronald Reagan, a two-term governor of our most populous state, is perhaps the leading spokesman of conservatives and three times a presidential candidate. Sen. Howard Baker is the most powerful Republican voice in the Senate, serving as its minority leader. John Connally, former governor of Texas, served either as a close adviser or a cabinet member to three presidents — Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon. George Bush is beating them all! Not that Bush doesn't have an impressive resume, but the names of Reagan, Baker and Connally have been household words considerably longer than that of George Bush.

The fact that Reagan, Baker and Connally are well known seems to be the very reason they are having difficulties in taking the lead among GOP candidates. Reagan is considered too conservative, while Baker isn't conservative enough. (Right wing Republicans are still angry at Baker for his support of the Panama Canal Treaty.) Connally has too much of a "wheeler-dealer" image largely because of his association with the scandal-ridden Nixon administration.

Because of the exposure of these three candidates, the public has come to realize that they are human beings who have faults and will make mistakes. We hope it won't be too much of a shock when we realize all of them are human.

An excellent choice

We applaud the announcement made in Tuesday's devotional assembly that the new classroom-office building on campus will be named the Spencer W. Kimball Tower. The reasons given for the decision are sound. There is no one else more deserving of the honor than President Kimball. Just the mention of the name of Spencer W. Kimball seems to create a unanimous feeling of respect and admiration among LDS and non-LDS alike — not only because of his position but also because of the manner in which he carries out the duties of his position. We're happy and proud to have his name included among the others on buildings at BYU that memorialize great leaders.

Revolution at the Y?

By Eric Eden

There are seeds of revolution at BYU. Not a revolution of guns and armies; not a fundamental change in political organization or in government or constitution; not even a sudden or complete change, but a basic reorientation and reorganization of thought; a revolution in thinking.

Something is happening here on this campus. We are finally, as a body of human beings waking up from the deep sleep of apathy and narcissism; waking up to an awareness of the world around us, a world of injustice, hurt and despair, the gravity and acuteness of which we have never ourselves experienced. Millions of people are starving and we are finally seeing it. We are conscious of all we possess that others do not, and we want to do something about it.

You and I personally did not cause the inequities of this world. We cannot change the events of history which have given more to us, but we can change the future. We can stop being apathetic and do something. We can and we are.

It used to be that one could walk around campus and hear endless snatches of conversation about this girl or that guy or fashions and food, or gripes about the administration. But, today I hear talk about the world political situation, not just chat, but people saying, "Let's do something." We have been urged to aid the Cambodian refugees and the editorial about it in The Universe were not just harangues — they were pleas for action. The atmosphere is beginning to be electric.

And now the students, not faculty and not administration, have initiated a fund drive to get some money together to send to the Y. We have a world voice and that voice is dollars — dollars that mean food, clothing and shelter, dollars that mean life and death for human beings.

How are we going to respond? If everyone gave $10 — the cost of one date, the cost of one tank of gas — we could raise a quarter of a million dollars. Would a quarter of a million dollars sound like a voice coming from BYU? It would sound like a rousing, thundering cheer for a better life for all of our brothers and sisters in the world. A quarter of a million dollars would say, emphatically, "We care what is going on in the world today and we can and will do something about it."

I'm sorry Rosalynn, but being the first lady it's only proper that you're the first to sign-up for the draft

By STEVE MCOWEN
ASBYU Academics Office Staff

In 1883 John Taylor admonished the church membership to put themselves "in possession of every truth... known among men," and "to seek for intelligence by study... that all may know how to take part in the affairs of the world." We all tacitly assume that it is the destiny of BYU to fulfill this and similar admonitions and to become the world's greatest university with the world's greatest students; after all, we have access to all the secular and all the spiritual knowledge that there is to be had on earth. BYU is, of course, making great strides toward this destined greatness. But many of us in the student body feel that greater attention is needed to the academic environment on campus in order to fulfill President Taylor's admonition.

The general environment on campus is not terribly intellectual. One professor lamented the fact that he had never heard a group of students discussing an academic topic. Students not enrolled in a current affairs class don't tend to read the newspapers. After all, the world is going to pot! Why try to stop it? "The campus is our world," and it's all the world we need be involved in.

This need is sufficiently important that an ASBYU Academic Office Committee has been formed for the purpose of organizing a forum of student thought in which students will have an opportunity to do independent research and present their findings to other students. The forum committee doesn't expect to change everyone on campus, but we must provide all with the opportunity for independent creation and thinking. Such a forum will meet the student body's needs on several levels.

One such need is for students to be familiar with the interface between their fields and the real world. There are often issues in this area that are not dealt with to any great extent in the classroom.

Through the forum we want to institutionalize the concept that part of being a student is to educate oneself, not to be merely acted upon by professors, but to act, to engage in independent thinking and research and then to help educate fellow students. The forum will establish intellectualism as one facet of student performance on equal footing with sports and social functions.

But perhaps the most serious need at BYU is for an environment where students can engage safely in non-constrained thinking, in a free exchange of ideas. We as Mormons know that sometimes we are expected to believe and obey without understanding. But at BYU this attitude has unfortunately been transferred to other areas. We accept a democratic republic as an ideal form of government without asking why; we accept a professor's interpretation of a literary work as the gospel truth without trying to work out our own.

That independent thought should be encouraged should be self-evident, but two reasons for it could be made explicit. First, only through a rational examination of both sides of a given issue can we know why we accept what we accept and reject what we reject. It's possible at BYU to have all our judgments made for us, but if our beliefs have no foundation when we get out in the real world and are confronted by opposing viewpoints, we're likely to get away. We as Mormons take some positions on political and social issues very peculiar to the world; we need to understand why, and this can only be accomplished in an unconstrained atmosphere. It might be objected that by letting devil's advocates have his due we will destroy the little faith in our positions — where we are right we will be vindicated; if we are wrong on some point must be corrected (speaking of course of secular, not religious topics).

A second reason for free thinking is the need for empathy; we need to have our thought processes challenged not just to strengthen them, but to help us to be comfortable with challenging the people who espouse them. We are uncomfortable with the challenge is very uncomfortable, and we are challenged. How in the world can we find monoliths with or be empathic toward other when we can't even rationally cope with them? Paul didn't make our mistake — he taught Greeks or Jews on their own grounds, not the standpoint of each.

We agree that BYU is destined to become the world's great universities. But we need to do more than provide the world's knowledge and skills; we need to train the world's minds.

Veterans' worker says ERA will affect draft

By Ina M. Robbins
Veterans' Coordinator

After reading the views of those supporting the draft for women, I would like to voice some views expressed by people who have done extensive research in this area.

Some of our congressmen have researched the possible consequences of extending "equal rights" to women.

The amendment simply states: Section 1. Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex. Section 2. The Congress shall have the power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article. Section 3. This amendment shall take effect two years after the date of ratification.

As some of our legislators examined the possible consequences of these words they were moved to propose certain amendments to the above sections. Sen. Ervin (D-N.C.) has introduced an amendment to add to Section 1 the following: "The provisions of this article shall not impair the validity, however, of any of the laws of the United States or any State which exempts women from compulsory military service, or from service in combat units of the Armed Forces; or extend protections or exemptions to wives, mothers, or widows; rape, seduction, or other sexual offenses."

All of this was rejected by a voice vote. Sen. Ervin, then proposed a substitute for Section 1, as follows: "Neither the United States nor any State shall make any legal distinction between the rights and responsibilities of male or female persons unless such distinction is based upon physiological or functional differences between them." Since there are physiological and functional differences between males and females, Sen. Ervin's substitute language would seem capable of eliminating the admitted troublesome remnant of laws which place women at a disadvantage, without creating the legal fiction that men and women are identical. But this, too, was rejected by the Senate Committee. A number of other changes were suggested, directed toward at least retaining for Congress the right to exempt women from the military draft.

Should this amendment become part of the Constitution, we will very soon discover that we have given the government not merely the "right," but the "Constitutional obligation" to take our daughters into the Army.

Because the registration of 18-year-old girls for compulsory military or national service, and the repeal of the three laws that exempt women assignment to military combat have been urged by Defense Sec. Harold Brown, we should send our senators and congressmen to them to draft women into combat. If we do not make no opposition now, Congress could the laws before the American realize what is happening. A three bills have been introduced. Congress to require drafting of It would be inhumane to temptible to send women into duty knowing that the average has only 60 percent of the strength of the average man. teaches us that battles are not co-ed armies or co-ed navies. Hitler and the Japanese, war short of manpower, found the Ballroom was not considered men in combat than female ordering women into combat send a message to the world have reduced the strength combat-ready troops from the strength of the average female.

Presidential response

In response to Blake Baxter's editorial of Monday February 11, we respect and commend him for being a concerned "citizen" by expressing himself and asking some questions about the performance of our administration. We appreciate those who are concerned enough to ask questions. However, Blake lacked several facts surrounding the issues which he questioned. We have met with him personally and have given him the needed insight on those issues. We will have completed 100 percent of what we promised plus several additional projects which will directly benefit the "citizens" of BYU.

Unsung CPAs

To the editor,
The Feb. 7 issue of The Universe ran a large picture and article on Patrick Painter, the first graduate from UTC-Prvo to pass the CPA exam. Since few students pass all five parts (eight to ten percent the paper said), that is quite an accomplishment and I do not object to the publicity given to Mr. Painter. My question is: since our Institute of Professional Accountancy has had over 70 percent of its Master's graduates pass the same exam the last several years in a row — why is nothing ever said about our own BYU students' clearly outstanding achievements? What is more noteworthy — one student at another institution passing the exam (even if he is the first) or 70 percent of our graduates passing an exam where the nationwide passing rate is 10 percent?

I guess the article should be considered a compliment to our program. Evidently graduates from our program passing the exam is so common that it just isn't news anymore.

Editor's note: Painter passed the exam after just two years of schooling. UTC is a junior college.

Jewish response

Nolan Crab's article on the Passover Seders conducted by Dr. Victor Ludlow, a Mormon, in Monday's paper points up a fine example of Mormons teaching Mormons about Judaism.

Since when is Passover (Pesach) a tradition of the past that had to be revived? Jews have celebrated it every year without fail since the Exodus from Egypt. I personally can't remember a family has failed to celebrate Passover. How can you revive a living observance?

Dr. Ludlow is not responsible for keeping Passover. We Jews have been doing a fine job of it without his help and we will continue to do so. What he has done is a great job of introducing non-Jewish BYU students to the Passover Seder and for this he should be commended.

Contrary to what Crab's article implies Passover is not the most important holiday of the Jewish people, although all our holidays are important. The Shabbat is the most important holiday.

The Jews have celebrated Passover and used three matzot at the Seder and assigned symbolism to them long before Mormonism came on the scene to assign different symbolism to them. Is Dr. Ludlow teaching about the Jewish Passover Seder or the Mormon interpretation of it? The two are not the same!

The broken matzah at Passover has no connection with Jesus Christ for the Jews when we celebrate Passover and such a connection would be inappropriate, if not outright offensive, at a Jewish Seder. For Jews, Jesus was nothing more than another Jew.

Anyone who reads Monday's article on the Passover Seder and feels it meant to describe the Jewish Passover is sadly mistaken. It describes Dr. Ludlow's version of a Passover Seder.

There is much more involved in the observance of Passover than just having a Seder. For a traditional Jew it is the most involved of the Jewish holidays to keep with all its special halachah (laws).

Would you ask a Jew to teach you about Mormonism? Why are Mormons asked to teach about Judaism (and a Jew who has converted to Mormonism) on campus and in nearby communities who can teach about their own religion?

Liggins concert

It is truly unfortunate that such a superb artist as Kenny Loggins be condemned to perform acoustical and visual atrocity the Smith Fieldhouse. The ar The Universe says that "the M Center was unavailable when signed." Does this imply the available on that night now? In to the statement that the Pie was chosen because the Ballroom was not considered enough, I ask which is more important to sell a lot of tickets, or to sell to a concert in an at least classy hall? If the numbers are considered more important because financial consideration then why hold the concert in the degrading Hall and charge higher admission? At least the degrading superior acoustics. Granted acoustics in the Marriott Center Ballroom may not be the best by any measure they are better the fieldhouse.
